Provost's Diversity Institute for Faculty Development
Starts May 10

The Provost's Diversity Institute for Faculty Development begins May 10, and events will run through June 4. This institute was created to offer Pitt faculty the opportunity to increase awareness about diversity and develop skills needed to teach in a diverse, multicultural environment. We will post the full schedule of events on our website very soon.
The Teaching Survey Period is Underway

Teaching surveys are open now through April 25. Research has shown that the most effective way to increase response rates and quality feedback is to communicate the importance of the survey process to your students. Here are a few tips for faculty during the survey period:

- Send personal emails encouraging students to participate.
- Show students where they can find their survey links.
- Talk to students about how to provide meaningful feedback.
- Give examples of how you've used student feedback in the past in your course(s).

For more information on the teaching survey period, please visit OMET's webpage.
